Presentation of the Faculty

Bård Anders Andreassen, Nordic Centre of Human Rights, University of Oslo
Prof. Andreassen is a political scientist with more than 20 years of experience from research and policy analysis in sub-Sahara Africa and South East Asia. Thematically his work has focused on issues of democratisation and human rights, particularly related to ethnic diversity, poverty and human rights, constitutional change and the conduct of multi-party elections in sub-Saharan Africa; transitional justice with an emphasis of the choice of TJ strategies and their effectiveness, development aid and the effectiveness aid with a particular focus on governance (political power and institutions), human rights and indicators of assessment.

Elina Pirjatanniemi, Åbo Akademi University
Pirjatanniemi is Professor of Constitutional and International Law and Director of the Institute for Human Rights at Åbo Akademi University. She is the Director of the Finnish Graduate School in Human Rights Research and the Project leader of the present Nordic research training course. She has researched and published on international criminal law, international environmental law, criminal law and human rights, and the relationship between domestic and international law.

Markku Suksi, Åbo Akademi University
Suksi is Professor of Public Law at the Department of Law, Åbo Akademi University and the National Director of the EMA Programme. He has researched and published extensively on participation (elections and the referendum), autonomy, indirect public administration, constitutional law, and comparative law. His most recent publication is on “Sub-State Governance through Territorial Autonomy. A Comparative Study in Constitutional Law of Powers, Procedures and Institutions” published in 2011 at Springer.

Jeremy Gould, University of Jyväskylä
Gould is Professor of Development and International Cooperation. The bulk of his empirical research has focused on the Southern African region, Zambia in particular, where he has carried out, all tolled, about six years of fieldwork since 1983. Gould’s current research interests revolve around the socio-legal dynamics of post-colonial state formation. His recent research has been on conditionality and the politics of poverty reduction; as well as the political deployments of legal rhetoric in the transition to democracy in Africa.

Thoko Kaime, University of Surrey
Dr. Thoko Kaime is lecturer in law in the School of Law and Deputy Director of the Environmental Regulatory Research Group. He has previously studied law at the Universities of Malawi, Pretoria and Western Cape and was awarded his PhD at School of Oriental and African Studies (SOAS). He maintains broad interests in public international law and socio-legal approaches to law. Thoko is currently involved in research investigating the linkages between children’s rights and sustainable development as well as the cultural legitimacy of sustainable development principles. He has published on socio-legal approaches to children’s rights and fieldwork methodology.

Celestine Nyamu Musembi, Law School, University of Nairobi, Kenya

Dr. Celestine Nyamu Musembi is a Kenyan lawyer with inter-disciplinary training and a background in legal anthropology. She researches and writes on land relations and gender equity in resource control, accountability of formal and informal institutions of justice and governance at the local level, rights-based approaches to development, and integrating participatory approaches into rights advocacy. She has extensive experience is field research.

Hatla Thelle, Danish Institute for Human Rights

Dr. Hatla Thelle is senior researcher and chief advisor on China at the DIHR in Copenhagen. She holds a ph.d. in socio-economic history and has a background in Chinese studies. Her research field is focused on social policy and human rights, including legal aid and access to justice. She has recently developed an interest in research methodology especially related to state reporting. Her geographical focus is on China and other socialist and post-socialist countries, where she has traveled and done field research for many years.

Reetta Toivanen, University of Helsinki

Dr. Phil. Reetta Toivanen is a social anthropologist with a research interests in human rights law, especially minorities, indigenous peoples, education, and anti-terrorism. She is senior researcher in the Finnish Academy project Power in Finland at the Centre for Research on Ethnic Relations and Nationalism, University of Helsinki.

Pamela Slotte, University of Helsinki

Doctor of Theology Pamela Slotte is a post-doctoral researcher of the Academy of Finland and a post-doctoral research fellow at the Centre of Excellence in Global Governance. She is also research fellow at Erik Castrén Institute of International Law and Human Rights Associated senior researcher, Institute for Human Rights, Åbo Akademi University. She has researches and writes on human rights, freedom of religion, global ethic, religion, ethical theory, moral philosophy, legal philosophy, political theology. The current post-doctoral research project is called “On Human Rights and Religious Personhood: Some Conceptual Remarks”.

George Ulrich, Riga Graduate School of Law, Latvia

Professor Ulrich is a philosopher and is presently the Rector of the Riga Graduate School of Law in Latvia. He has previously been the Secretary-General of the European Inter-University Centre for Human Rights and Democratisation in Venice. He has also held research positions at the Danish Institute for Human Rights, University of Copenhagen and Makerere University. His current research interests include philosophy of human rights, health and human rights, medical ethics, professional ethics, human rights field work, human rights education, and EU human rights policy and practice.
Paul Gready, University of York

Professor Gready is the Director of the Centre for Applied Human Rights at the University of York and convenor of the MA in Applied Human Rights. He has worked for Amnesty International (on East and Southern Africa, and India) and a number of other international and national human rights organisations, and has wide-ranging experience as a human rights consultant. Most of his practitioner and consultancy experience has been in Africa, with a particular focus on South Africa. Usually linking academic and practice-based concerns, he has published on a number of human rights-related topics, notably transitional justice and human rights and development. For over a decade he has also been involved in the development of interdisciplinary, practice-based human rights teaching curricula.