Language – an important tool in healthcare

Would you like to know more about language and cultural aspects within healthcare professions? Do you want to develop your own language skills or lead the language development of others in multilingual work environments?

During 2020, Åbo Akademi University offers the following professional development courses connected to healthcare professions: two multiform courses (2x5 erts) focusing linguistic and cultural aspects in relation to working life, as well as a skills course (Swedish/Finnish) mainly situated at the workplace. The first two courses consist of IRL meetings during four days (at 13-16) with digital meetings between.

Course language varies according to the lecturer, but participants are free to choose theirs. Participants' understanding will be supported in the three course languages Swedish, Finnish and English.

Targetgroup: Healthcare professionals, particularly in elderly care.

Time: Spring 2020: Multilingualism in society and working life – focusing healthcare (5 erts)
Autumn 2020:
Leading the development of language skills at the workplace (5 erts)
Developing language skills at the workplace (0 erts)

Contact: Liselott Forsman, liforsma@abo.fi
